

XANDORIA GALAXIES

Dogpa

Long before the Justice and Judges Guild ruined Xandoria, the Dogpas lived uneventful lives. They wandered the desert and collected junk. When mankind took up residency that all changed. The Dogpas were forced from their nomadic ways by an ever-growing population. As disaster after disaster unfolded, these humanoid canines kept surviving. Some snuck onboard ships and traveled to other worlds, while others made their own towns and cities. At the peak of life on Xandoria, Dogpas had established themselves as powerful allies against the forces of evil. But like all good things, the Dogpas were forced to give that all up when Xandoria was evacuated. Some stayed behind to fight the last battle while a handful of others secretly stowed away on the colony ships. Today the last of the Dogpas struggle to maintain their race. Life on the lower decks has caused sterility from radiation exposure and lack of food pushed others to turn to a life of savagery. In a sweeping move, the Protectorate hunted down a large number of Dogpas and exterminated them. Only about a hundred Dogpas are left. Most are scavengers, picking through garbage trying to get the day's meal. Amongst their ranks there are Dogpa Hunters, those who carried the torch of their brethren from Xandoria. They constantly train and when they are needed, step up to fight. The government of Olympus is aware of the few survivors, but has chosen to leave them be for now. After all, Zeek, a Dogpa scavenger, has set up shop in the human quarter and made many friends. His knowledge has proven to be valuable towards the survival of the ship.

What is a Dogpa? These are humanoid canines that evolved from dogs brought to Xandoria by privateers during the Dark Age of Space. Most have full canine features, but the newer generations have slowly moved away from that. The tallest Dogpa was recorded at over eight feet tall while the shortest was only two feet tall. They have a sharp sense of smell and can actually tell if someone is lying just by the odor they give off. This only works on living creatures, which is why Dogpas really HATE androids. In battle, a Dogpa can be a powerhouse, but their lack of DRAW ability is a huge limitation. They do let off a battle cry that can inspire the most cowardly Dogpa to fight.

XANDORIA GALAXIES

DOGPAS

Class: Hunter (FULL EXP)

Primary MAX Increase Per Level

Intelligence 20 +1

Agility 20 +2

Spirit 30 +1

Might 40 +3

Movement 30 +2

HEALTH: +20 Per Base Level

Dogpa Nose: -30 to all Notice Rolls involving living creatures

Night Vision: Dogpas can actually see in the dark.

War Howl: -10 to all combat Rolls for 1d10 turns

MAY NOT USE DRAW DISKS

MAY NOT USE ANY SHOOTING OR THROWING WEAPONS

We hope you enjoyed this little teaser. We have posted this because Dogpas will not be included in the core book: Xandoria Galaxies. This PDF is usable with Xandoria Galaxies.

For more background to Xandoria check out Xandoria Saga Collection available at Amazon.com.

Xandoria is property of Dilly Green Bean Games.

Basic V is property of Dilly Green Bean Games.

This PDF was written by Jay Libby.

Art by Jay Libby.

For more info on Xandoria check out www.dillygreenbeangames.com

